In his illustrious career as a cartoonist for the New Yorker and other publications, Joseph Farris has created dozens of hilarious cartoons about "the best game in the world at which to be bad." A.A. Milne had it right, and Farris's cartoons get to the heart of the game's wonderful contradiction: over the course of eighteen holes, golf has the capacity to bring great joy and drive you crazy. Farris treats us to the sight of a blissfully happily newlywed with "Just Married" emblazoned on the back of his golf cart; of an archaeologist who discovers a hieroglyph featuring an annoyed-looking pharaoh breaking a golf club over his knee; and a TV-watching husband who rebuffs his naked wife's amorous advances in no uncertain terms: "Not now, I'm watching Tiger Woods." It's been said that real golfers don't cry. That may or may not be true. Joseph Farris's cartoons are sure to make any golfer laugh.

This report contains a range of gender statistics which examine the relative positions of men and women in Europe in terms of income, influence and social roles at three stages of life, youth, adulthood and in retirement, as well as marking developments over time. It looks at education and household trends in childhood and at the age at which young adults leave the family home. It goes on to examine inequalities in working life, caring activities, participation in decision-making in politics and the economic sector, as well as the state of health for women and men. The final section reviews relative gender positions beyond retirement age, including income, health status and social relations, life expectancy and whether or not they are still working.
