Nuer religion is decidedly "this-worldly" in orientation; they do not imagine a heavenly abode awaiting them upon death. Like other Nilotic peoples, the Nuer regard long-deceased ancestors with respect and veneration, but are concerned in their earthly lives with the power of the recently deceased to cause misfortune.

The present volume, Nuer Religion, completes a study of the Nuer which began in 1930. Accounts of religion in writings on the Nuer are generally meagre and superficial. The only detailed treatment is in Father J. P. Crazzolaro's Zur Gesellschaft und Religion der Nueer (1953), much of which appeared earlier in volume viii of Father W. Schmidt's Der Ursprung der Gottesidee (1949).

The description of Nuer religion is based on fieldwork in the 1930s. It is one of the best for Africa at the time and still today offers what tribal life was like when lived in relative isolation from complex societies. Analysis is based on the structural-functional methodology of Radcliffe-Brown whose work was inspired by Durkheim.
